Dear sir:

I firmly believe that in order to prevent a severe depression even worse than the depression of the early 1930's from occurring very soon, the president of the United States and his most sagacious economic advisors must immediately make provisions for each county in every state to receive adequate funds from the federal government so that each American citizen may be properly fed and clothed.

The reason that I am concerned over the present situation is that I have talked to residents of this city who are on the verge of starvation without justification.

I was greatly saddened at the death of your brother.

Sincerely,

John W. Davis
